Superintendent's Highlights

The district completed an extensive remodel of the existing school. In addition to the upgraded facility, additional classrooms were created from existing space.

The district is four years into a five-year cycle of reviewing and rewriting district curriculum. Last year K-12 math curriculum was developed along with extensive criterion-referenced tests to measure student success.

The school facility was completely rewired for technology during the remodel this past year. In addition to district efforts, a federal Goals 2000 technology grant was awarded for secondary mathematics. An extensive infusion in technology brought about by Albertson's grant funding will add to these efforts.

Test scores have continued to increase in most areas of the curriculum on both state and national tests at all grade levels.

Progress Towards Meeting District Goals

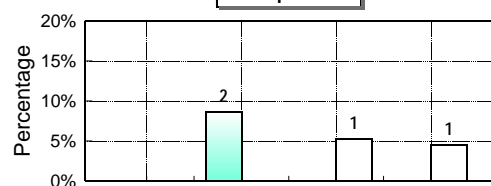

1998-99 Goals	Progress
Create a value-added mathematics curriculum.	The district has revised K-12 math curriculum, developed criterion-referenced math examinations, and supplemented the curriculum with extensive software. Test scores showed overall improvement in math during the school year.
Develop a cadre of master teachers to enhance student learning and provide mentoring for their peers.	Five of the district's teachers, (17% of the staff) have been accepted to work with the University of Idaho, leading towards National Board Certification. Four teachers piloted the district's Professional Growth Teacher Evaluation system, funded with an Idaho Creative and Innovative grant, leading to enhanced teacher satisfaction and student learning. This program will continue in the future.
Increase participation in extended day and summer programs.	Participation in the after-school program continues to increase. During the summer of 1998, the district offered a summer program for K-3 reading. This summer program will be extended to include math during 1999.
Enhance communications inside and outside of the school.	Students, working under direct supervision of faculty members, have enhanced and expanded the district's web site and community newsletter.
